Project Overview

I partnered with Arthur Feriotti to create blog content that positioned him as a leadership authority for data professionals. The goal was to translate his coaching insights into long-form articles that built trust, supported SEO visibility, and provided practical value to his audience while aligning with his personal brand voice.

Authority-Driven Topics

Selected blog themes that addressed leadership challenges faced by data professionals.

SEO Content

Wove in targeted keywords and structured posts for readability, helping Arthur's website gain organic visibility.

Engaging Storytelling

Balanced frameworks, case studies, and personal stories to make complex leadership concepts relatable.

The Challenge

Arthur wanted to extend his thought leadership beyond LinkedIn into long-form content. However, creating blogs that resonated with data professionals required a balance of expertise, storytelling, and SEO. The challenge was to ensure the blogs not only reflected his authority but also stood out in a crowded leadership coaching space.

Highly Saturated Space

The leadership coaching niche is crowded with generic advice, making it hard to publish blogs that felt fresh and differentiated.

Technical-to-Leadership Gap

Arthur's audience needed content that bridged technical expertise with leadership skills, without sounding overly academic.

SEO Competition

Ranking for leadership and coaching-related keywords is competitive, requiring strategic keyword targeting and on-page optimization.

Consistency Demands

Blogs needed to be published regularly to build credibility and momentum, which can be difficult without a structured system.

Reader Engagement

Many leadership blogs are either too theoretical or too vague. The challenge was to create content that was actionable & relatable.

Work Process

SEO Blogs Process

01 Topic Research

Researched themes relevant to data professionals transitioning into leadership — ensuring each blog addressed real challenges and aspirations.

02 SEO Strategy

Identified high-value keywords in the leadership and coaching space, then built them into blog titles, subheadings, and content for better discoverability.

03 Content Outlines

Created detailed outlines with clear structures (problem, insights, solutions, key takeaways) to make the content engaging and actionable.

04 Storytelling & Practical Insights

Blended Arthur's personal experiences, industry examples, and actionable frameworks to make the blogs both relatable and credible.

05 Editing & Optimization

Polished each piece for readability, SEO, and flow — while ensuring the blogs aligned with the website's positioning and Arthur's coaching offers.
